About this form

It's important that you read the below information before completing this form, including the instructions section on the next page.

Please use this form to make a binding or non-binding beneficiary nomination, or to change an existing nomination.

For more information about beneficiary nominations please refer to the Protect Super Plan PDS available at www.neosprotect.com.au/PDS

Non-binding nomination

A non-binding nomination is a request for the Trustee to pay your benefit in a certain way in the event of your death. It is not legally binding but is taken into account. The Trustee is obliged to follow the law in working out who should receive a death benefit.

Binding nomination

A binding nomination instructs the Trustee as to who receives your insurance benefit in the event of your death.

Provided your binding nomination is valid, it will remain valid for three years, unless you change or cancel it. After three years, if you have not provided another valid form, your nomination will become invalid.

It's important that you review your nomination regularly, particularly if your personal circumstances change, as in the case of marriage or divorce.

If your nomination is invalid, the Trustee will exercise its discretion when paying out your death benefit. An invalid binding nomination includes a nomination being made more than three years ago, the form being incorrectly signed and witnessed, or, the beneficiaries nominated no longer qualifying as dependants at the date of your death.

Who can I nominate as a beneficiary?

You can only nominate one or more dependants and/or your personal legal representative.

A dependant is any of the following:

- your current spouse (including de facto spouse) of either gender
- your children of any age (including adopted children, stepchildren and your spouse's children)
- someone who is financially dependent on you; or
- someone with whom you have an 'interdependency relationship'.

Two people have an 'interdependency relationship' if the following apply:

- they have a close personal relationship
- they live together
- one or each of them provides the other with financial support; and
- one or each of them provides the other with:
 - domestic support and personal care, but not if one of them provides domestic support and personal care to the other under an employment contract, a contract for services, or on behalf of another person or organisation such as a government agency, a body corporate or a benevolent or charitable organisation; or
 - support or care of a type and quality normally provided in a close personal relationship, rather than by a mere friend or flat mate.

Two people also have an 'interdependency relationship' if they have a close personal relationship, but they don't meet the other requirements of interdependency because:

- either or both of them suffer from a disability including a physical, intellectual or psychiatric disability; or
- they're temporarily living apart.

Your legal personal representative is the executor of your will or the administrator of your estate. You can nominate your legal personal representative to receive the whole or part of your benefit. If you nominate your legal personal representative, your benefit will form part of your estate and be distributed in accordance with your will.

Taxation

Generally, as stated on the ATO website, superannuation lump sum insurance benefits paid on death to a dependant are wholly tax-free.

Please note however, that a 'dependant' for tax purposes is not identical as a 'dependent' for superannuation purposes. For example, while children aged 18 or more are valid dependants for binding nomination purposes, they're not considered to be dependants for taxation purposes, unless they satisfy the definition of a 'dependant' in superannuation law in some other way (for example, they're considered to be 'financial dependents').

Depending on who you nominate, there may be different taxation consequences. You should obtain taxation advice about this, having regard to your personal circumstances.
